

- I strongly encourage the FCC to not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.
- Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has improved my time at home by decreasing interruptions. I work out of my house, and my productivity is significantly higher since Indiana implemented its Telephone Privacy law protections.
- I used to receive 10-15 unsolicited telemarketing calls a day, and since Indiana's law was implemented, I receive less than one a day. At an average of 3-minutes a call, this saves me as much as 45-minutes a day which I can spend on work, or with my family.
- I consider unsolicited telemarketing calls (even from those companies with whom I have a customer relationship) to be an invasion of my privacy, and a nuisance.
